

Summary

SKETCHES OF HISTORICAL AND SOCIAL CONTEXT OF GENDER BUDGETING

The author first points out two different approaches in the discussions leading to the introduction of a gender responsive budgeting. Furthermore, he points out some phenomena, such as wealth, poverty, meeting the needs at the existential level, or at the level that determines the quality of life in a different way, as well as, whether all of the listed phenomena affect some form of deviation. Man, as a natural and social being, tends to satisfy their needs, which vary depending on economic, social, cultural and technological opportunities and status in the society. How to fulfill them without a clear and previously prescribed position defended by the sanction that provides equal distribution of resources in the society for both men and women to satisfy their human needs. The paper also points to the concept of human rights as stipulated in the international documents ratified by our country, which seeks to ensure that all people must have secured access to the same resources in the society. The author points to the fact that the Budget System Law stipulates the obligation that the provisions of this Act relating to gender-responsive budgeting will be applied to budget beneficiaries in accordance with the annual plan of gradual introduction of gender-responsive budgeting, and in general to the budget of the Republic of Serbia and local government budgets for 2020.