Petar Lazarević-Cukić is one of the most significant personalities in the history of the Serbian people after the Second Serbian Uprising. He was a close associate of Prince Miloš Obrenović, his man of trust. He performed many duties, from a personal security of the Prince, to a member of the National office, head of the Karanovac and Ibar County, head of the Kruševac County and district and a member of the National council. He was a short tempered, willful man, which caused common riots of the people and disagreements with the superiors.
