

Summary

THE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN PRINCE MILOŠ AND THE MARAŠLI ALI-PASHA IN THE TOWNS OF JAGODINA AND ČUPRIJA IN 1815

The negotiations between the Serbs and the Turks began simultaneously with two Turkish commanders, as it was necessary to determine the conditions they were willing to accept. Due to the fact that Marašli Ali-Pasha's was open for compromise, and due to his high office in comparison to that of Huršid-Pasha, prince Miloš held the final stage of the negotiations with him and his emissaries in the monastery Jošanica in Čuprija. Even though the negotiations did not meet the all of the Serbian demands, still a peace agreement was reached and the position of the people was significantly improved in comparison to the previous period. The Serb leaders became an unavoidable topic in the Serb-Turkish relations in the pashadom.
